

Danielle Campobasso

Danielle Campobasso has over 20 years of dance experience. She began dancing at the age of 3 and has received studio training in ballet, tap, jazz, lyrical, modern, and hip-hop. During those years she danced competitively and attended national competitions as well as numerous dance workshops. Danielle attended Bartlett High School her freshman year and was placed on the Varsity Poms squad. Her sophomore year of high school she auditioned and was accepted into the dance program at the Chicago Academy for the Arts where she received technical training in ballet, modern, and jazz from some of Chicago's top instructors including Randy Duncan, Anna Peskevaska and Eduardo Vilaro. At the age of 17 Danielle began to teach at a local dance studio in Bloomingdale where she taught ages 5-15 for 4 years. At the age of 21 Danielle auditioned for the Chicago Luvabulls (the dance team for the NBA Chicago Bulls) and was accepted for the 2005-2006 season. During her experience as a Luvabull she performed at the Bulls home games, participated in charity and promotional events, and helped out with the junior luvabull program. Currently she substitute teaches at local dance studios and continues to perform with a Chicago hip-hop cover band.
